608 SW 6th Avenue is a one-story Vernacular house. It is clad in stucco with a flat roof clad in cold membrane. The front entry projects out from the primary facade and has a centered front door. The house was originally noted for having incised stucco around the entrance replicating the look of a stone surround and keystone. Additional alterations including the application of stucco over the brick flanking the windows on the primary facade and the addition of an applied coping to the front and entry roofline. These alterations substantially alter the appearance of the house.

Windows: Sliding, fixed-pane
Alterations: Replacement door and windows, reparged in smooth stucco
